Jed Stone, Frillby United:

"From the Sports Editor Eric Philpotts LONGDALE COURIER - Skelsthorpe
I have lived in Skelsthorpe for the past twenty years and I've seen some strange sights but what I saw on Saturday outside the Beeblebrox Stadium soars to the head of the list. The Oxford English Dictionary defines 'eccentric' as 'unconventional or odd'. It is not a term I would normally apply to football supporters but the sight that greeted me outside the Beeblebrox Stadium on the day Slartibartfast played the Dummies will cling to my brain for many years.

There has been a lot of controversy over aliens playing football of late and prior to the match it had been hinted that the Dummies were going to field an alien and the best defence against aliens was water! Place that idea in front of any other team in the league and the supporters would laugh it off and enjoy the match, but these supporters are the 'Slarty Boys', and they are unconventional to say the least. The majority of fans attended the match wearing homemade hats of kitchen foil to 'keep the alien thought waves at bay!' and, unfortunately, armed with a variety of water pistols of various calibres. PC Brooks (and Bonzo) supported by the Skelsthorpe WI were having no problem with crowd control even when the coach carrying the 'Dummies' arrived. They all got off the coach and posed for fans to take their photographs and there was no trouble. All was as it should be. Then as they headed inside a tall green figure rose from the crowd waved a huge green paw in the direction of the Dummies and cried 'Cooooeee'. With a cry of 'It's an alien', the photographer, a Mr T. Truet, dropped his camera and let fly with a shower of water from his super blaster water gun, striking the alien in his midriff. For a second the world stood still then someone yelled, 'Run! Its Grunthos the Flatulent!!' Vogon Poet Master Gunthos has been known to render a full concert hall insensible with just the first stanza of a poem so while a large portion of the crowd tried to put as many miles as possible between themselves and Gunthos the rest began drenching him and everyone else with water from their water weapons.

It took some ten minutes for the rolling pins and wet tea-towels of the WI to restore order. By that time Gunthos had dissolved and evolved back into three wet Slarty boys in a Gunthos costume. The match, needless to say, was forty minutes late in starting and the trauma of having Poet Master Gunthos the Flatulent wave to them may well have contributed to the dummies losing the match which ended in a 4-2 win for Slartibartfast.

As a final twist to the occasion, Lord Kraigenkrink, Chairman of the Dummies, was admitted to hospital yesterday after being found by his secretary slumped across his desk dribbling profusely, after opening a letter which read, 'Dear Sir, Damn sorry to have missed the match against Slartibartfast. It sounded great fun. I've been a fan of the Dummies for years and I have written the following poem to inspire them in a forthcoming match.' It was signed P.M. Gunthos. Miss Crankness, secretary, was also admitted to hospital in 'a hysterical state'. It is believed that she may have glanced at the first line of the poem, which was subsequently removed by a Government Super Secret Biohazard team for safe disposal. The hospital says that Lord Kraigenkrink and his secretary are both as well as can be expected in the circumstances."

Editor's note: As long as they're not building highways or reciting poetry, the Vogons can actually be quite agreeable fellows... maybe. As for the water, maybe this would work just as well on the cartoon minors that stack on top of each other in a trenchcoat to go watch a movie?

3. Apprentices discovered

None.
